

Acupuncture Point and Channel Energetics

By Montakab, Hamid

Book Condition: New. Publisher/Verlag: Kiener | Bridging the Gap | Acupuncture Points and Channel Energetics (Based on Chinese Classical, Daoist oral and European traditions) - There is a gap between the known classical texts on Chinese Medicine and the variety of concepts and styles that have been transmitted and are being practiced today. Two major tendencies have dominated Chinese Medicine in the past decades, Classical Chinese Medicine (CCM) as opposed to Traditional Chinese Medicine (TCM), a term coined during the early years of Communist China. Historically, as Chinese Medicine spread to other neighbouring cultures, it further evolved, and was enriched by these influences. This explains the variety of methods and concepts, that are not to be found in the Chinese Classics, and that have made their way to the West. Another source and great contribution has been the Daoist oral tradition, with concepts which complement and explain many of the classical writings. - This book is a work of compilation of the classics, with the oral traditions and the European acupuncture, namely the French tradition, supplemented by the author's personal clinical experiences. - The book covers all of the theories pertaining to the energetic structure of the body, the channel...

READ ONLINE
[6.34 MB]

Reviews

Comprehensive guideline! Its such a good read through. It is actually written in basic words and not confusing. I am just easily could possibly get a enjoyment of reading a composed book.

-- Lonzo Wilderman

I actually started reading this publication. It is full of knowledge and wisdom You wont sense monotony at at any time of your respective time (that's what catalogs are for relating to should you check with me).

-- Vilma Bayer III